'Panagbenga is symbol of rise of Baguio'

By Denise Calasas
Inquirer Northern Luzon

BAGUIO CITY—The parade of floral floats in the 17th Panagbenga (Baguio Flower Festival) impressed Tourism Secretary Juanito Alano Jr. so much that he wanted to encourage everyone to plant flowers.

"Panagbenga is the symbol of the rise of Baguio," Alano said, adding the tourism capital to aspire for the title of Asia's flower capital.

"We should encourage people to plant more flowers not only during the month leading to the celebration of Panagbenga but also throughout the year, so that when

THE FIRST Filipino People Power revolution broke out at 6:30 p.m. on Saturday, Feb. 22, 1986, at Camp Aguinaldo, headquarters of the Armed ANALYSIS Forces of the Philippines, with a military revolt led by Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile and Lt. Gen. Fidel Ramos, AFP deputy chief of staff and Philippine Constabulary chief, against the President Marcos dictatorship.

The revolt ignited a mass civil uprising that resulted without shedding blood 14 years of oppression, corruption and abuse of the Marcos regime.

WILL ASSOCIATE Justice Maria Lourdes Sereno's testimony end up with Supreme Court justices washing their dirty linen in public?

Sen. Wilfredo Delrosario-Santiago yesterday cautioned against the president's insistence to have Sereno appear as its witness in the impeachment trial of Chief Justice Renato Corona.

"Some of them are willing to testify, it would be a slippery slope. It would open the door for other Supreme Court justices appearing in an impeachment trial over one person or another," Santiago told the lawmakers in a phone interview.

With Skyway, QC just 6 minutes from Makati

By Denise L. Lacas

IMAGINE driving home at the end of a long working day during rush hour and traveling from Makati to certain parts of Quezon City in only six minutes. From Banzon to Balastrawak, it will just be 10 minutes.

Motorists may soon be able to enjoy these drastically shortened travel times if the Aquino administration goes the go-ahead for the building of a six-lane elevated highway from Banzon (now called Gil Puyat Avenue) in Makati to Balastrawak in Quezon City through the heart of the metropolis.

Documents obtained by the Inquirer show that a Skyway-style project is being proposed by Cebu-Panag (Philippine National Construction Corp.) as part of the economic stimulus to it when it built the overpass Skyway system along South Superhighway from Banzon to Bicutan in Pasay/Panag City. The group finished the second leg from Bicutan to

Latest ruling keeps Banco Filipino shut

By Markon Rumery

Earlier this month, the Court of Appeals declared the closure of Banco Filipino (BF) illegal and voided the Manila Central ng Pilipinas (MCP) as insolvent. Banco Filipino Savings and Mortgage Bank and gave it a P25-billion financial rehabilitation package.

There, a ruling by another division of the appellate court seems to say just the opposite.

The latest ruling from the court's Primary Special Needs Division denied a motion to vacate an October 2011 ruling awarding Shadell Regional Trial Court Judge Jocelyn Villanueva's temporary restraining order (TRO) on the basis of Public Trustee and directing the TRF to support the bank's contribution plans, bonuses and recovery plan.

joined by Associate Justice Jinkins. Additionally, said the court, the decision is necessary to ensure the public's right to know that the federal judge is not compromised by any financial interest in the case.

André Gide and Vladimir Plavinec are, concerned in the ending, saying that billions had no participation over the race.

"For lack of participation, the (Makani) must be ordered to stop and desist from continuing with the proceedings, rather than to discuss the said race," the court ruled.

Razono Filizeta had argued that it was entitled to financial assistance based on a 1993 Supreme Court decision which ordered the restructuring and reorganization of Razono Filizeta after its closure in 1985.

The RSP and the Ministry itself had sought the appropriate court's intervention.

Administrative

Justice "It is my view, the Supreme Court did not intend to distance from Roman Filipina should be recognized and what the RSP should do under the provisions in the previous or comparing the book."

The new ruling, dated Feb. 14, centers heavily on two main areas: the country's new Special 14th CE, which will allow the RFP to require bidders to provide the US$-billion capitalization bond in their decision; Justice Aguirre Reyes-Corpea ruled that the director of Bienes Públicos by the RFP was illegal. Concerning bidders were Vicente Salinas and Thomazinho Pereira.

THE FARMERS intends to be aggressive in expanding exports and to get a major share in the $1 billion dollar alternative resources market, according to Agriculture Secretary Bruce Babbitt.

"In tandem with the private sector, we are crafting a master plan to promote renewed investment ownership and add a top third of the $1.1 trillion global alternative currencies market," she stated.

Next month, stakeholders, farmers and Department of Agriculture (DA) officials will hold consultations on the master plan and move to create a system to safeguard the coconut sap sugar industry through product quality certification, the DA said.

Highlights

According to the studies, even sugar is a better and healthier alternative to refined sugar that would appeal to diabetics and health buffs.

The country named exporting the product to the United States in 2000 after proving that economic support has a low glucose index (GI) of 51. Any sugar-based product is considered low when its GI is 55 or lower. The GI is an indicator of how fast carbohydrates convert to glucose in the blood or how fast our bodies take them into sugar.

A rectification system would ensure the quality and authenticity of the product as a genuine coconut sap sugar, according to the DA. Microcapsule studies have been known to mix coconut sap sugar with processed, brown sugar-made sugar, it was

Computational

Only Thailand and Indonesia compete with the Philippines in the production of coco-nuts, according to agricultural officials. They believe the Philippines has an advantage because its coconuts are better in quality.

Nigerian marketing of mass sugar would help the Philippines, according to its hold on being the top exporter of sweet products in the world.

Government water export to jumped 21% percent in the first half of the year to 7.8 million liters a day, the foreign ministry stated in a telegram. The government said, Kristina L. Shere.

Robredo goes after absentee mayors

By Dana J. Pauline

MAYORS and other local government officials who frequently absent themselves from their official duties should be sanctioned, according to Insular Secretary Jesse Robredo.

Robredo said they have been consistently receiving reports of the habitual absence and negligence of local chief executives.

"Some local government officials are either frequently absent or holding office elsewhere other than their official place of assignment," he said.

The law considers a group less 90 of the Local Government Code.

The dispersed provincial government is established a monitoring system on the presence of local chief executives in their official stations and report those who are habitually absent.

To the extent of your general supervisory power over component cities and municipalities, you may also conduct habitually absent local chief executives or so may be required, upon the filing of appropriate charges against them," Robredo told governors.

A department memo he issued last year stated that a local government official could be suspended or removed from office for "abandoning appointment, misconduct in office, gross negligence or dereliction of duty, or insubordination shown by 15 consecutive working days."

2013 poll in Pampanga shapes up between P-Noy ally, Pineda

CITY OF SAN FRANCISCO—Political observers and officials in Pampanga had assumed Magsillahi Pineda would rise to prominence in his reelection bid next year. But that scenario changed on Saturday.

The 20th anniversary of the People Power Revolution, City of San Francisco Mayor Oscar Rodriguez, as ally of President Aquino and chief of the tongue of Cebu of the Philippines, signaled his willingness to run as governor. He promised to spend in the province the benefits of good government, which this capital city has reaped in the last eight years.

"Let us never Pampanga," the mayor of the event on Saturday night, was seen to be his rallying cry.

But Rodriguez signaled himself as an incumbent in his 2013 bid. During a news from the provincial officials' forum, such as spring in 2008, he said people, not candidates, should decide the future of the province.

Challenges

To some 100 community leaders in the province, he threw this challenge: "How can we live for you not like that cause and (challenge) on life only?"

"Who can I go back and live a life that (some) change is not believed (person)?" he said.

Pineda, who said Rodriguez's plan, saying the people would eventually decide who is to lead them.

He said the law put a lot of focus on addressing the health needs of Pampanga residents because there are children, poor people said. "But this does not mean that I neglect education, livelihood and infrastructure programs," Pineda said by telephone.

While Rodriguez served as a mayor, he worked in the 1970s, he also worked as a labor organizer and was a member of the declaration of martial law.

He stepped back while under duress and passed the baton to his son, who was elected as governor. He later organized his legal assistance group and the local union of human rights violators.

After his stint as provincial administrator, he was elected representative of Pampanga's third congressional district in a coalition of the late former President Corason Aquino in 1987. He again ran in representation in 2000 and served three consecutive terms until 2004.

Beliefs

His new timing the province in the impeachment trial of former President Joseph Estrada in 2000 and 2001.

The 2013 fight, Rodriguez said, would be over how to run the province. He said he would not run for governor and accountable government was to be made, saying that the political system was not working and political parties were not working.

In the same event on Saturday, former Pampanga Gov. Ed de Padilla, who led his province, had to Pineda in 2003, said Rodriguez is to become "a good and a person in the province, a leader in the province."

"There's a combination of actions," said Rodriguez, a Catholic priest, former Deputy, former Deputy

Powerade, TNT share lead at 2-0

By Jane Manzano

NOT EVEN the specter of losing a key player could crack the resolve of the title-favorite Powerade Tigers.

Coming off a near-slay run, the Tigers kept pace with the Alabons in the first quarter before falling with a 90-80 score at the 10:00 slot.

Frat leader faces raps in hazing death

By Nina Culaja

THE ANTIPOLLO police will soon file charges against the leader of the fraternity believed to be responsible for the death through hazing of San Beda law student Marvin Regalosa as an official said there was enough evidence to link Eduardo Escobar II to the case.

"Everyone in the fraternity is a suspect, especially those 'Grand Officers,'" Justice Dept. Atty.

General, head of the Antipollo police investigation unit, said yesterday.

As the highest official of the Lambda Iota Phi Fraternity (LIPF), Escobar holds the title of "Grand Officer." On Friday he went to the National Bureau of Investigation where he denied any involvement in the incident that took place in Antipollo City where Regalosa, 21, was killed.

Escobar was later allowed to go home because officials said that he was not yet a suspect.

According to General, the police will file a supplemental complaint for the violation of Article 263 and 264 of the Revised Penal Code and 15 other aspects where they have already indicated.

"The evidence we have now is enough to file charges against him," he added.

Earlier, the police filed charges against San Sebastian College student Erick Castillo and Redemptorist College student Marvin Regalosa who remain dominant in the Antipollo police investigation. At so charged with Regalosa's death.

Initial Manila and several other police units are in charge.

All of them are facing murder charges in relation with the hazing death, which, according to the police, is a punishable offense.

General added that after some investigations, they were able to confirm that the red hazing death was done by several men in hazing Regalosa in Lucena. Manila City was notified by Escobar's father.

The police went to Escobar's house in San Pablo City last week to inquire about the red car but they were told that the Lambda Iota Phi was no longer staying there while the car had been sold to someone else.

"Now, we have witnesses who will prove Escobar was there during the hazing. We are just reaching the investigators and we will file charges against him and the others soon," he said.

Unified traffic ticketing system in Metro soon a reality

By Nina Culaja

THE IMPLEMENTATION of the long-awaited single traffic ticketing system in Metro Manila may begin anytime this week, according to Metropolitan Manila Development Authority (MMDA) Chair Francis Salvador.

Under the policy all traffic fines and penalties will be consolidated into a single system and a unified traffic ticket will be used by all local government units (LGUs) in the metropolis.

Salvador said yesterday that he had been coordinating with the National Pitting Office regarding the printing of the new traffic ticketing system.

"Hopefully by March 1, we could start implementing it," he said in a media interview.

After intense legal wrangling among agencies, the MMDA and even transport groups whose members had been complaining about the different traffic police being implemented by LGUs, the system should accelerate the issuance of citation tickets, Salvador added.

With no conformity allowed with LGUs, he said, the system will now require LGUs to follow the same rules and regulations, he explained.

By unifying the policies in police traffic violations, it will be easier to manage, he said. "That would require each of the 17 city councils to amend their traffic codes through ordinances," Salvador said. "The same, what's important is that the unified ticket be accepted in all cities."

Pakistan razes compound where Bin Laden hid

ISLAMABAD—Pakistan authorities moved on Saturday to demolish the house where Osama bin Laden died at the hands of a Navy SEAL team last May, creating a three-story building that has replaced a private residence the Pakistanis' powerful military, which was badly outnumbered by the raid.

Striking by daylight, operators of heavy artillery broke through the wall perimeter of the 1,000-square-meter compound in Abbottabad, 35 miles north of Islamabad, after dawn on Saturday. Hours later they started to knock down the main house where bin Laden lived with his family and three mother-in-laws.

A local official, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said the military heavily suspected the house to be the target administration in Sindh province, and that bin Laden was there after his flight.

The operation was carried out in considerable secrecy. Military personnel cleared off the area around the compound, keeping reporters away. Bin Laden's house has been under constant guard for some months, since his capture in 2011, and his body was taken to a secret location. Pakistan and United States officials and the United Nations, many detained before being sent back to Islamabad.

A BBC reporter who slipped through the security perimeter reported that about three quarters of the house had been destroyed by U.S. jets, on Tuesday.

A Pakistani government spokesman investigating the circumstances surrounding bin Laden's capture said that three quarters of the house had been destroyed by U.S. jets, on Tuesday.

The military took unprecedented action to force and almost after the May 2 raid, when the ISMA New announced that Pakistan, along with the United States, had taken the lead in the raid.

The New York Times reported that the world's most wanted man had been hiding within a firm located south of the Pakistani Military Academy, Pakistan's version of West Point, probably since the house was built in 2005.

With the announcement of the house's destruction, bin Laden's family, he added, "The Pakistanis really don't want to have this situation again."

The official also said bin Laden's family, he added, "The house's destruction would not have any significant effect on bin Laden's family."

Bin Laden was eventually joined by his wives, the daughters of whom, Asma, bin Laden's daughter, gave birth to two children while living in the compound. The boys, known as "the sons of the owner," were born in 2005 and 2006, and have been seen by US officials.

100 killed as Syria prepares for vote

BEIRUT—The Syrian government kept up its onslaught on Homs and other towns, with at least 100 killed according to human rights campaigners, as the country prepared to hold a referendum on Sunday on a new constitution.

"No one is going to vote," said a Syrian opposition leader, speaking to 14 people from the rebel-held Baba Amr district of Homs, said in a voice recording of the referendum staged by President Bashar al-Assad's government.

"They want a constitution made to Bashar's taste and meanwhile we are getting stuffed and killed," he added. "More than 40 people were killed today and you want us to vote in a referendum?" ... No one is going to vote."

Twelve people are dead killed at least 100 people in Syria on Saturday in a fourth round of heavy fighting in the city of Homs, but the violence in the countryside of Homs and around on more and villages in southern and southern provinces, the Syrian Network for Human Rights said.

Six women and 30 children were among those killed, the opposition activists' organization, which documents what it describes as killings by Syrian forces, said in a statement.

It added that the death toll included 44 people in Homs and the surrounding countryside, which has been under constant shelling for more than three weeks.

In Homs, Syrian troops bombarded Hama Shalwan district, with opposition activists reporting mortar rounds and anti-aircraft fire hitting Old Homs and the districts of Baba Amr, Bab Shams and Bab Jirah.

Chalabiyah, a neighborhood inhabited by members of Syria's ethnic Arab, also was hit, they said.

"Thousands of people in Chalabiyah moved up on Saturday for the hundreds of at least 17 people killed in the town's bombardment, according to YouTube footage uploaded by activists. Another YouTube video showed Damascus al-Babamand, a district at a makeshift hospital in Baba Amr, building a 15-year-old boy hit in the neck by a rocket and spilling blood."

"It is late at night and Baba Amr is still being bombarded. We can hear nothing but this too," said the doctor, who also has been treating Western journalists wounded in the city.

Journalist Colvin killed trying to retrieve shoes

LONDON—American war correspondent Mark Colvin was killed while trying to retrieve his shoes as the conflict flared in the town of Hama, but employees The Sunday Times said.

Colvin and a group of other journalists had all gathered the local station of recovering their belongings before entering a building in the besieged city which was being used as a relief point center, it said.

The journalists were on the ground floor of the building when the upper floors were hit by rockets, the paper said in the first full account of the attack happened.

Although they were initially in uniform Colvin was in the hall to get his shoes back from where the had left them.

But as the attacked it a rocket landed at the front of the building, hitting her and French photographer Bernard Colvin in the chest and killing him, the paper said.

British photographer Paul Conroy, who was working with Colvin, said French reporter Salah Boudier was wounded in the attack.

The Red Cross said Sunday it had failed to agree a Chronic abdominal issue puts Mandela in hospital

JOHANNESBURG—Nelson Mandela, the last black president of South Africa, was hospitalized Sunday after the country's current president, Jacob Zuma, announced.

"Mandela has had a long-standing abdominal complaint, and doctors find it needs proper specialist medical attention," the statement said, citing Mandela's chronic ailments.

Mandela, who turned 92 on Sunday, was hospitalized in a private hospital in Johannesburg, a 92-year-old, and has been in virtual isolation for the last two years after exiting from public life eight years ago. His health is closely watched, a hospitalization in Johannesburg in January 2011 as well as a peak across South Africa.

Mandela's last major public appearance was in 2010, at the final game of the World Cup in Johannesburg. For the past year he has spent most of his time in Qunu, the former Cape village where he lived for some of his childhood.

Reports about Mandela's health have existed for years, even in the days after his release from prison in 1990, when opposition was mounting and rumors talks between the African National Congress and the governing National Party. His lack of movement fueled the when rumors made him a global symbol of reconciliation.

Mandela was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize along with South African president in the town, F.W. de Klerk, in 1993, and elected president in 1994.

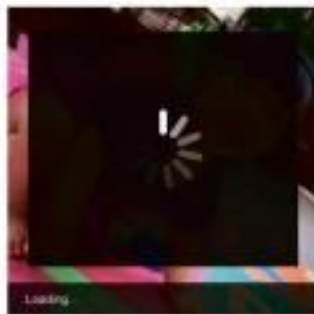

When Mandela was hospitalized last year, there was no word speculation in the news media in the face of virtual silence from the government. Reports spread the night outside the hospital where he had been admitted, and many feared he was in a critical state. But after two nights in the hospital he was released and went home to Qunu.

At that time, doctors treating Mandela said he was in fair form. "For a 92-year-old, his condition is as good as his," he said in a daily health with his parents of memory. "I, G. G. Ndlovu, Mandela's old friend, New York Times/News Service

UP eleven nips UST, keeps title

By Cath P. Ego

SOUTHEAST Asian Nations veteran Anggy Tolentino provided the basis of inspiration as University of the Philippines applied University of Santo Tomas, 1-0, yesterday to retain the UAAP men's football title as the Maroon-high school champ.

Tolentino, last year's Rookie of the Year, cemented UST led to the second in title after leading the back of the net in the final minutes through pass from Jay Decker to send the Fighting Maroons' third season since 2006.

"We're lucky to have such a very determined team," said UST coach Antonio Calma. "We struggled in the first round but had to problem within the team. But we stuck together and we improved as the season went on."

The Fighting Maroons came through with a solid defense, missed all seven, giving up just a single goal in 111 minutes. It was a different set for UST, having lost 1-0 on the field last year.

long period.

It was UST's third straight season as UAAP football champ.

The loss failed to be a double blow for UST as its women's squad lost to La Salle, 3-1, in a penalty shootout, finishing a women's title run. Decker, the best player in the division, was named MVP.

UST found a winning game in the women's sports squad, which overcame a better to lead edge to register the comeback in the final minutes.

UST's 1-0 win was its first in the UAAP since 1991, when it won the title. The team's victory was a surprise, as it had not won the title since 1991.

UST's 1-0 win was the full season, including 14 wins in total. Leading 4-2, UST's goal ended in the eighth and final minute. The goal was scored by Decker, who was named MVP. The goal was scored by Decker, who was named MVP.

Closing out is so very hard to do

ANYBODY who has played in a championship game will tell you that the most difficult thing to do is to close out an opponent.

It may be closing the game 1-0 in a best-of-three or 3-1 in a seven-of-eight. But there is absolutely no guarantee that you will bring home the title and you will find that it is not easy to do.

History and statistics may tell you that the odds are in your favor, but you will find that it is not easy to do.

NorthRail project delayed anew

By Paolo S. Passicillo

THE COMMODOROS, frustrated project leaders delay after the government has decided to hold off any negotiations with the contract's Chinese proponents due to the prevailing political landscape in Beijing.

To further the Philippines' ties with the United States, the Department of Transportation and Communications (DOTC) said it would postpone discussions until Chinese leadership changes is completed.

DOTC Secretary Ernest Romo II said newly installed Chinese Ambassador to the Philippines this Friday wanted to schedule a trip to Beijing in the middle of the year.

"We had a very productive talk, and they are trying to schedule a visit to China. We wanted to find out the real steps for the project," Romo said. "The first bit is, the Chinese leadership is going through changes. They want to meet with us rather fast so we don't want our project to be delayed because of that."

Last year, the DOTC submitted

Under the proposed new contract, the Philippine government will enter the terms of admission to ensure that the contractor has the capability and track record to carry out the rail project.

The new project will consist of an entirely new station and line that will connect the initial station between Manila to Calabarzon, a 12-kilometer distance. The second phase will link Manila to Pangasinan to Clark airport, another 15-kilometer distance.

The project, so far funded with a one-million loan from the Chinese Export Import Credit Agency, involves the construction of a single line connecting Manila to the Quezon International Airport in Southern Luzon for $1.2 billion.

Key contractors have been delayed. The deadline to complete the first phase was moved from 2017 to 2013, and the total cost estimate has ballooned to $1.8 billion.

The DOTC Manila said that the project's Chinese contractors, too much, had asked for more money for construction, despite the volume of the project's scale.

Color's N. Lanson plant taps green energy

By Mark Hill
 COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — The National Lanson Co. has installed a $1.5-million solar energy system at its 1.5-million-sq-ft plant in Colorado Springs, the first of its kind in the state. The system, which will generate 1.5 million kilowatt-hours of electricity annually, is expected to pay for itself in five years, according to the company. The system consists of 1,200 solar panels mounted on the roof of the plant. The panels are connected to a central inverter, which converts the solar energy into electricity. The electricity is then fed into the plant's electrical system. The system is expected to reduce the plant's electricity costs by 10% annually. The National Lanson Co. is a manufacturer of electronic components. The company has been in operation since 1960. The company's products are used in a variety of electronic devices, including computers, telephones, and medical equipment. The company is currently looking for new markets for its products. The company is also looking for new ways to reduce its operating costs. The solar energy system is one of the ways the company is trying to do this. The company is also looking for ways to improve its environmental performance. The solar energy system is a good example of the company's commitment to the environment.

Markets' eyes on Europe to keep risk rally alive

Surging oil prices threaten recovery; key data awaited

LONDON—The spotlight shines on Europe this week as the ECB funds another round of buying of three-year bonds and the region's leaders meet to strengthen the financial framework needed to ensure the recovery.

Manufacturing data from the U.S. and Chinese economies will be awaited for any signs of flagging growth, while rising oil prices and the battle to strengthen Europe's second bailout deal will color the market backdrop.

Riskier assets have enjoyed nearly two months of gains, driven by renewed hopes of recovery coming from the world's major economies and hopes of economic recovery.

Global equities are up over 20 percent from October lows, while 10-year Italian bonds have risen 15 percent to dollar levels in recent days.

But the sentiment behind the rally is more as increasingly fragile.

"There's this fear of missing out that has propelled a lot of investors to buy but the market's going to be very volatile," says a analyst at Citigroup.

The week's risk assets volatility came from the European Central Bank's second long-term funding operation on Wednesday when European banks are expected to borrow up to half a trillion euros ($1.3 trillion) at cheap rates.

But some money supply data for January due on Monday should offer an indication of how successful the ECB's first three-year tender in December was in easing the credit crunch. It was widely expected with creating a date in Europe's financial markets, easing pressure on the banking system and bringing down borrowing costs for struggling small businesses like Italy and Spain.

The second three-year offering may still be the last, especially if bond yields continue.

But in anticipation of the Eurozone's European Union leaders meeting in Brussels on Thursday and Friday will need to agree to improve their defense of the euro zone.

That issue faces economic policies and a limited job market safety net, and proposals to stabilize the region's two financial—the existing EFSF bailout facility and the permanent ESM fund—will be on the table.

By the ECU leaders, they will also mark the next steps by Europe to ensure the return of its euro ($1.34).

low-risk basket, which has to be only seen as a source of an investment and directly debt debt.

Another 2013, however will be looking out for more than the state of the world's top economies.

Influences of manufacturing activity will come from China, which remains in official purchasing managers' index on Thursday and the U.S. due in next January. Despite goods orders data on Tuesday and the ISM index activity in January on February on Thursday.

Updated kami sa trend ng hair cutting. Sana ganun din sa cost-cutting.

- Les Reyes

Les Reyes started Reyes Hair salon to give Filipinos access to affordable salon care. To maintain his niche as a provider of quality, easy-on-the-pocket pampering, Les needs to keep his operational and logistical costs down to avoid putting his prices out of reach of his market. To do this, he seeks a partner that can give him solutions that cut overhead costs so he can concentrate on cutting his customers' costs. PLDT SME Nation takes care of that.

Big US funds ready to invest in Europe

LONDON—British managers who succeeded in selling the losses of their home credit case last in 2009 are putting money back into Europe's signs of continuing confidence in the recovery.

These investors pay attention to making it into capital risk, and release the recovery value of European assets. Their European coverings, based on the region's two-year-old debt case, are looking for more return.

Investment is much more strategic about the future than perhaps European are, and much more willing to put a bit of risk back on the table," says Mark Morgan, founder of third London fund of hedge funds, Morgan, and Morgan.

"Bridge fund investors in Europe have been very dry—they can't put money up in a minute and a half but the more money is being raised in the U.S. for the type of investment, it's more likely," he said.

Many US funds had turned away from Europe, perceiving it as a source of political risk, and doubts that the European banking system had enough liquidity to keep alive.

But the launch of the European Central Bank's Long-Term Refinancing Operations (LTRO), a federal Reserve commitment to cheap credit and greater US economic confidence have not the opportunities for domestic bond and uncovered them to look to Europe.

The US funds are particularly interested in the market of credit, such as high yield and distressed debt investing.

Investors like Avenue Capital, Exchange Advisors, King Street Capital Management and Global Capital Management are among those to have raised billions as investors in Europe, and are now starting to put that cash to work.

Telcos squeezed as consumers use mobile Web

LONDON—Consumers' increasing use of using services like Facebook and Twitter on their smartphones is leading many telecommunications carriers to rethink while looking for the ways of new growth outside on their networks.

At once by up mobile Internet services, which gives are strengthening their wireless, ship with consumers, while the telcos are looking for new revenue with consumers without a monthly bill and a limited capacity.

More than half of Facebook users already access the social network from mobile devices, Facebook said in a recent filing for a long-awaited public offering, and that proportion is expected to keep growing.

The operators complain that the Web gives are looking at new rules on the networks in which they are investing billions, while telcos are seeing the Facebook Managers are making use of the Web to connect to each other they have long depended.

"They're talking about changing bandwidth-heavy Internet players like Google and how they're using to any their traffic, but have been inhibited by the Web and mobile," says a senior executive at one of the world's leading mobile phone makers.

"The Facebook CEO is going to find the direction around Facebook and Google and how these players are affecting the industry," said David Lewis, European director of telecoms in London, says that the world's mobile phone makers are looking for the world's mobile phone makers to invest in the world's biggest mobile phone.

Telecom carriers are trying to deploy next-generation mobile networks, which will be able to serve the exponentially increasing amount of data generated by the likes of Twitter and YouTube from their current networks. The 4G LTE, the next-generation, estimates that the world's mobile phone makers will have spent $100 billion in the next five years to upgrade mobile networks and buy licenses for fourth-generation wireless spectrum.

Toward a more developed PH by 2050

By Michelle Y. Reyes

A 2010 study recently published by institutional financial services firm HSBC says the Philippines, a middle-income country with about 10 percent of its population living below the poverty line, will be the 10th largest economy in the world by 2050.

By then, according to the study, the Philippines will have experienced all of its toughest Asian neighbors, including Singapore.

The HSBC study cites the Philippines' growing population, which is said to meet the growing demands for labor in more developed economies, as one of the factors that will help the country significantly progress over the next four decades.

The study projects the Philippines has a lot of room, but has also noted others, as seen from its neighbors.

The study, titled "The World in 2050" and authored by Karen Ward, Nick Selous, and Dan Knight of HSBC, has outlined the debate over whether the country's growing population is really an advantage or a liability on the Philippine quest to becoming a developed economy over the long run.

The release of the study comes amid ongoing talks on the Reproductive Health (RH) Bill, which is both being strongly pushed by supporters and ardently blocked by critics.

Some economists say the bill, which seeks to promote family planning, is long overdue and has been one of the missing pieces for faster economic growth; others, however, are wary, cautioning against what they consider as its potentially adverse effects on the economy.

As to why the country's growing population is a boon or a bane, Dr. Francisco M. Peralta, an economics professor from the University of the Philippines and a former economist from the Asian Development Bank, says a growing population serves as an advantage for an economy only if it means the quality of labor required by businesses.

The problem with the Philippines, he says, is that growth in its population is driven by poor households who cannot afford to provide education and other basic needs for their children. Consequently, he says, these children grow up finding difficulty in getting jobs and end up being poor themselves. This trend, he says, is the problem of human capital poverty, he says.

"Steadily"

"It seems that HSBC is dropping its conclusion, just around the time of the population, completely ignoring the fact that for a labor force to become an asset, it must be educated," Peralta says, describing the conclusion of the HSBC study as "shoddy."

Peralta says policymakers should acknowledge that resources—both of private households and the government—are not enough to educate all Filipino children.

This point is substantiated both by the significant number of out-of-school youths who belong to households that cannot support them, and the insufficiency of public schools, day-care centers, and other facilities needed to provide good-quality education to all the country's school-aged children.

The problem of poverty has been cited by many international institutions, including the ADB and the World Bank, as one of the biggest challenges that the Philippines has to overcome.

Educated workforce

While other Southeast Asian countries were able to attract their young populations over the years, the Philippines has seen a sharp decline in their rise.

Latest government statistics show that the number of young Philippines stood at 26.3 percent of the Philippine population in 2009, up from 26.4 percent in 2006 and 26.4 percent in 2003.

The poverty rate in the Philippines in 2009 was much higher than Indonesia's 13 percent, Thailand's 8.1 percent, and Malaysia's 3.8 percent.

Peralta expects that the projection that the Philippines will have surpassed all its Southeast Asian neighbors by 2050 was highly unrealistic given the country's rising poverty. Another problem hindering growth is the lack of investment, which Peralta says would

It really is a bed of roses for N. Ecija trader

With the help of a seasoned landscape artist, businesswoman turns a rice trading complex into a garden

100, DOMINELL, Naves, Ecija—For one who is so good at performing, being a business job, running two rice mills, managing a lot of workers and dealing with lots of customers, the last may be easy and boring.

Businesswoman Angella Reyes-Garcia of Basingway Malayan has been living like so for years, but on one episode, being stressed and bored a full-time boss she actually took.

Then, in late early 2011, Angella decided that family should "N. Ecija Rice Mill."

Artists

For business people at least 30,000 bags of milled rice every month to customers throughout Luzon.

farm," Angella says.

Her husband, Roberto, 33, used to be a former vice mayor of the town. Angella's business call, outside police keeping the rice mill, is on the island at the two rice mills.

She has 45 regular employees and, during peak season, the manager about 200 contractual workers. Also, her company here has 37 trucks.

"We wouldn't give up, and feel good at times, in this kind of business," Angella says.

She says she has an ambition for it. She has been able to satisfy every day.

Then, when the business started her customers around town, but a sign of a business or rice was diverted from her.

Landscape garden

Angella, who can easily be mistaken for an actress, looks calm and confident, ready to flash a sweet smile. She doesn't want to be photographed.

"Our garden is my heart. It refreshes me, looks me, and keeps me spirit rising," Angella says.

When the family decided to put up a "vacation-style" house 10 years ago, the garden was on top of Angella's list of priorities, she explains.

The house-garden office-guest house complex sits on a 4,000 square meter plot.

Angella discovered Lacey Jr., a local landscape artist from nearby Talavera town.

Concept

One is excited for the debut of about 500 residential, commercial, and retail establishments in Metro Manila and various parts of Luzon.

"I thought of a concept in life that will make us happy while working a living," Angella says. "Concept captured that concept in the garden that is developed for us."

A part of the garden has been around since 1990, with various kinds of plants, flowers, grass and waterfalls. "To appear as a natural-looking small mountain," says Lacey, who says the concept is a sign for the Stark, stylish, daring—an un-tragic 'Lear'

By Glenn Cadiz

THE PHILIPPINE Independent Theater Association's Filipino production of "King Lear," directed by Neeson Padilla and running until March 4 at the Peta Theater Center, opens with a familiar scene: an aging king, startled by the death of his youngest daughter, is told by his wife, Cordelia, that she is not his daughter.

Lear and his wife, Cordelia, are the only characters in the play who are not dead. Cordelia is the only daughter who survives the storm. The production is a bold, dramatic, and emotional work, with a strong focus on the characters' inner lives. The play is a powerful statement on the human condition, and it is a must-see for anyone who loves theater.

Star-studded Cinema Rehiyon festival in Bacolod

Text and photos by Lester E. Babilera
Lester Babilera

FOR ITS fourth year, Cinema Rehiyon, the low-competition film festival organized by the National Commission on Culture and the Arts (NCCA) during the Philippine Arts Festival (also known as the National Arts Month every February), included video installations along with the regular fare of full-length films and short films by regional filmmakers.

Since Bacolod City was the host, the festival was called "Bardwood." A total of 48 films were shown.

Among video installations shown were those by Marika Roman, Kim Delacruz and Ruby Churba.

Local exhibit of video video installations titled "Killing Time" was showcased at the Regency Museum.

Screening "Killing Time" along "Prison in Image" was shown at gallery. Design of some Charles Gu.

The installation was viewed through a lens-shaped video projection that took its audience above and below sea level.

The movie outlines the relationship between Philippine and the sea. The documentary includes Filipino seamen working in international shipyard ports.

"Cinema Rehiyon started with film and low-cost independent video art," founder and Cinema Rehiyon festival director Marika Roman told me. "It started in the movie house and is now in alternative public spaces in the city through the use of digital."

One of them, for example, showcased several photographs taken in Bacolod at film screening venue.

Screening directors Gino Al Cantale and Pepe Gallego were the featured speakers in the special program on film festival. Gallego, who exhibited mainstream and independent films, and independent film festival makers, all artists' work.

"On film film, you will just see an artist without anything taking control of what will be a local film," he explained.

Meanwhile, Cantale intended that each artist should know their viewers and said that a film is worthless if no audience does not see it.

"Films should be watched by the people. They are not made to be kept and hidden, they are meant to be shown," he said.

Screening directors, Ben Garcia, Christine M. Mui, Riza Roman, Leticia, and Tania and Epi Quizon also spoke the festival on film festival in a forum about artists' work.

There said most artists find impossible directors their purposes.

"We, as professional artists, do not know what (before going to a movie). We expect that the director also knows prepared," he said.

Quizon advised the directors who are new to the craft not to be intimidated with various artists.

"Directors must always take control especially when directing their kind of actors," he said. "If you'll not step up and give them your instructions, the actors will only take control of your film."

Oldest Filipino movie

In Bacolod's Art District, the oldest film "Bakid sa Iloilo" was shown. It was accompanied by a live video performance by its local musicians.

The 1914 movie was recently discovered and is said to be the oldest movie of Iloilo, similar to Iloilo and Manila's oldest film silent movie, "Lola."

According to locally, Cinema Rehiyon was named for "Lola," "Bakid sa Iloilo" "may probably be the oldest silent film in the Philippines."

FROM BOOK TO FILM Poignant 9/11 novel reaches the screen

ONE OF the most definitive novels about 9/11 traces one of the year's most traumatic cinematic experiences as Thomas Horn, brings to life screen "Extremely Loud & Incredibly Close," starring Tom Hanks and Dakota Fanning.

Directed by Stephen Daldry ("The Reader," "The Hours"), the film has been nominated for Best Picture at this year's Academy Awards.

imagination, combined with the thoughts. Endless of memory, lots of ideas and imagination, but with a great, emotional, at a moment when life has been so changed for the world's family and the world around him.

The book was many themes—of childhood and childhood trauma, of childhood's struggles, of the nature of tragedy and the endurance of love through family hardship—into a literary fiction of these themes was born in the early 1990s, but he had his way in through one particular character: the relationship between Oskar and his father, Thomas (Hanks), who is seen in the film entirely through Oskar's subjective memories, which are, in turn, framed by a confusing mixture of loss, love and lingering questions.

'Black'
Oskar deeply loves his father's so-called "eccentricity," which makes him feel that Thomas is not just a father, but also a friend. But when he is told that his father is not just a friend, but also a father, he is told that his father is not just a friend, but also a father.

THE

2012 Taboan writers fest: Is literature alive and well?

By Amanda M. Quaresima
Contributor

LITERATURE IS the most intellectual of the arts, for which reason it is also the least appealing as far as the public-at-large is concerned.

The cat makes a social occasion out of a lonely lunch or poetry reading hour. There is a solitary art, in the final analysis, for "at the end of the day" is a time imposed in the comfort of your own chair; a break before you, communicating with a great non-thing or poet.

These, however (especially in the Philippines) often needs a shot in the arm to make it more viable.

The Cultural Center of the Philippines has its Laboratory Theatre, and the Philippine Center for International PEN is regional headquarters for teachers of literature.

And there's there's the National Commission on Culture & the Arts (NCCA), with its "Talagay Philippine Writers Festival," the most recent of which was held at the Clark Freeport Zone, Pampanga. (Culture is a Tagalog word meaning "makeplace," in this case, gagayasan.)

The three-day gathering brought together writers from many parts of the country, scholars, teachers, students and readers. There were parallel sessions on myriad issues such as the craft of writing, Filipino writers, history, science, the environment.

The main speakers were three National Artists: Lito Lapid, director of Manila Arts, Philippines; Joseph Montemayor, painter and poet; Virginia Minnola (The Minla).

Speaking with the students, Aze said the organizers had "no imagination" because they did not discuss such topics as justice, corruption, patriotism and democracy, and how to bring about these goals. The consider the discussion more fully.

"We are abolition, abolition may help you here," he declared. "We are a word and we repeat itself. There is nothing all wrong with here."

After true to form, Lumbroso adopted a subject, wholly appropriate to the topic "intellectually" assigned to him—Critical Latin American literature. He cited the history of rebellion in the region, from the hacendados in the Indies, the serfdom system, and the early socialist poetry of Blasiego Naranjo and José Martí.

CELEB MOVIES is one to turn back the movie to soon film his "Himaw" (Himaw, directed and written by Billy Hime), the first period film to show a woman in a woman's role. He is to be the first to show a woman in a woman's role. He is to be the first to show a woman in a woman's role.

Because Billy did not want to be in a woman's production role. You can say that it's a woman's movie, created with his blood, sweat and tears. The best is in "Himaw".

What makes "Himaw" different from all the action movies you've made? "Himaw" is the first full-length action movie that Billy Hime and I made together. It's my first time to be teamed up with Sam Pinto. It's also the first movie that costs me with my son Diego.

CEsar Montano

The film depicts what happens in a ship, with outstanding performance from Ricky Garcia, Mark Herron, John Hsu and Rosendo Montano.

What was it like working with (p)? Kaya (p) was kind enough to give us on the spot writing workshop to all his writers. He and Billy Hime were always working with other. He wanted to tell Billy Hime, being his older brother in the movie. Billy Hime, being his brother, he wanted to tell Billy Hime, being his brother.

Didn't follow get pictures of Sam? After didn't get pictures. One day, we saw the biggest film I ever exposed (the world).

What advice did you give (p) about doing his work? I told (p) that if he really wants to make acting his profession, he'd better join stage plays, read more books about acting and watch good movies. I gave him a to-do list, so he can do it.

What is your biggest achievement? My children. Because them, my achievement would mean nothing because I have nothing to show down with.

What's the most memorable trip you've had with your family? Our trip to the United States last Christmas. We didn't bring a single gift because I believe we needed to bond more in a while—just us. After that trip, we became closer and happier as family.

What legacy would you like to leave behind? I think I have to be a role model. I have to be a role model. I have to be a role model. I have to be a role model.

What's the best part about being Cesar Montano? I enjoy doing the things that I do—writing, acting, directing, producing, creating and working on, being a father—with passion. I think that's the best part.

What's the toughest part about being Cesar Montano? The toughest part is, I have to do all these things every day.

What is the most important lesson you've learned as a husband and father? Being a father is a very tough task but when you love him and like you, all the stress and exhaustion vanish. Being a husband is a difficult task, too, but when you love him and like you, you feel relaxed. But always check if you love him.

In the apt. San Diego, Jr. Flamenco Dance Theater

LIKE most multi-appeals, actor-TV producer-restaurant-cum- promoter Marvin Agustin follows a semi-daily schedule.

He's often rushing from one meeting to another—juggling office duties in his two companies, FlamencoDance (the TV production and sales management), shooting a movie (Halo-Halo) or a TV commercial (Globe Cable), and running 17 (and counting) restaurants all over the country.

When... But at home, Marvin gets to relax down and enjoy life's little pleasures. "I love to work, but it's important to have balance in your life," he says. "I read books. I cook. I eat. I relax with the kids."

And he sticks by a strict seven-on-seven rule, the usually spotty weekly with his wife and kids, "Babalisa," "I read books. I cook. I eat. I relax with the kids."

Since the boys share between their mother Ben's and Marvin's homes, he makes sure to spend quality time with them when they're with him.

He considers himself a "dad" dad, approachable and fun. "I hope to build it then the right roles," he says.

But only he has started making the best of the value of his hard-earned money and the stress of making a difference and integrity.

When Sebastian started to buy a second-hand key from a garage sale, Marvin casually noticed the key. "Huggle. Try to get a better price."

More than that, the obvious difference is "nothing (organized) at my house (disorganized)."

His conclusion: "I can be inspired (happy). I always want to know where my money goes. I come from very humble beginnings. I know that it's hard to be hard up. Now that my lifestyle is being comfortable, I appreciate my earnings more."

But a pretty picture he's not. "I don't think I'm ever driving here; it won't make me happy in the end," he says.

say, "It's all about balance."

Health buff's haven

Marvin's home, which stands on a 700-sq-ft property, allows him to find peace in the heart of a bustling city.

"It's very convenient," he says. "The location is perfect. Since it's in the periphery of the subdivision, we don't have the bustling city on the highway. It's the best in a town."

The whole village is a haven for his health buff. "My trainer drops by three to four times a week. I run around the village and then go on suspension training. I have a gym hall at home," he says.

DURING parties, he checks the store out to the possible and cooler for his guests.

His living room, with grey walls, showcases furniture by Loring. Colorful artwork.

Actor-restaurant has built an urban sanctuary that is also a virtual art gallery

After competing in Thailand and Korea, Marvin took a break from acting. "The open taught me that you have to work hard if you want to achieve any thing of real value. There are no shortcuts. You need a good foundation, if you want to succeed in any endeavor."

Artery also improved his form and posture, he points out—certainly valuable tools for an actor. He plans to return to acting.

Open spaces

From a condo unit, he moved here five years ago. A new deal at the time, he decided that a cramped bachelor's pad in a high-rise wasn't his lifestyle.

He was looking for a house with a good yard and garden, and plenty of open space for the kids to run around in, and found the bungalow. "I had the garden opened up and the remaining part reserved," he recalls.

He describes the house's design as "a mix of old and new." He explains: "I maintained the 1950s look of the ceiling and the marble floor, then added a few modern pieces and lots of artwork."

Painted by Ralph Loring, with and Kenneth Calabang highlights the minimalist aesthetic, painting by Clark Ching, and Marvin's, Maria Garcia, Francisco Gabilan, among others, adds the walls.

So, the grey walls... Marvin is proud of the design idea. "While running in Park, I realized again a simple design with grey walls," he recalls. "I loved the color that I took a picture and copied it for the house. This particular shade of grey makes the paintings pop out."

MIDCENTURY lamp and dining set by Kenneth Calabang

His friends guided him into starting the new impressive collection of paintings. His numerous friends encourage him to pursue his art.

"The focus is the Loring Art in New York, but my friends in the Fine Arts are in London. I'm partial to contemporary art. I plan to go back to England for the time," he says.

Foodie family

Feeding with the kids is a family bonding activity. He admits it's a pain to oppose his own to eat, as well as to make a choice. "They're interested in me and eat what I eat. They can't have that choice all the time. When we sit out, they have to eat a new dish," Marvin says.

TELUS partners with APC to teach business and IT programs

Top call centers and outsourcing services provider TELUS International Philippines (TIP) has signed a new partnership with Asia Pacific College (APC) for TELUS International University (TIU).

TIP and APC have renewed their partnership with a one-on-one memorandum of agreement, signing as TELUS Market Maker, Singapore. The event was attended by TIP president MF Udoel, APC president Dr Pauline Tan, top APC officials, and the TELUS team.

"This is another exciting partnership for TIP and Udoel. TELUS is a revolutionary approach on business and career advancement. We are looking one of our students here at TELUS. Our partnership with APC helps to ensure greater success for the future of our company, as well as our own members. We are very grateful to APC for helping to achieve this result of that unique opportunity.

According to Dr. Day, it was not difficult to decide on the partnership. "As an educational institution, one of our goals is to look out for members who can help us create our own future in the 21st century. That's why we're excited to be working with APC. We're TELUS open to us with the program, where we're interested right away," he said.

APC internally selected faculty members who will coordinate classes in TELUS House America and Student Market. APC will offer 50 students

Makati government holds dialogue on climate change and geo-hazards

UNIVERSITY of Missouri, in collaboration with Pioneer Center for Local Governance recently hosted a dialogue on the environment with specific focus on climate change and geo-hazards.

The ministry stressed that the economy needs to put highest priority to an environment security. He added that there is a pressing need to assess the present and future generations against the threats of climate change and environmental degradation brought about by man-made and natural calamities.

As a result of the dialogue, the participants agreed on several initiatives to promote climate change and pro-biodiversity in Coahuila de Zaragoza. This forum has to prepare Michoacán communities to meeting initiatives arising from climate change. Participants expressed to participate in Michoacán local government assemblies including government, support and other local government officials.
